Daryl Baldwin

Daryl Baldwin is a revivalist of the Miami language from the Miami Tribe of Oklahoma. He is currently the leader of the Myaamia Center at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.[2]

Baldwin taught himself Miami from historic documents and studies held by the Smithsonian's National Anthropological Archives, and has developed educational programs.[3] He has worked with Leanne Hinton's Breath of Life project for reviving endangered languages, and raised his four children as native speakers of Myaamia.[3][4][5]

Baldwin has also been a member of the cultural resource advisory committee of the Miami Tribe of Oklahoma.[6]
